Only those who have experienced it can understand the comfort of heating stones. The writer, in those far off depression days in Maine when only the modestly wealthy could afford luxuries such as hot water bottles, when warming pans were only pictures in books, in a house lighted by oil lamps and unheated except for the great black kitchen stove; recalls going to bed with the luxury of a heating-brick.

Each child had a brick. Warmed for hours in a wood-burning stove (rarely expensive coal unless it could be gathered beside the railway track, where the engineer would toss out shovel fulls to little sister as she was pretty and stood there smiling at the train). The brick was heated, then put in a cover bag of inner rotten old cloth, and an outer tough canvas, so's not to burn, and so's not to lose heat too quickly. The specially-selected, big bricks, properly wrapped would keep a bed warm for 3 or four hours. They were delightful.

Those who have lived with heating stones instinctively realize, their wonderful warmth and importance- why in those long gone times a very sick child would have two or three heating bricks.

, GONNERSDORF. Both wood and buffalo chips are prairie fuels. Buffalo chips are so-named because intestinal haustra of bovines creates turds which dry to form lumps which will break into discs something like very large poker chips. Horse manure must be thrown against walls to dry before it burns. Buffalo chips burn slowly like peat and a few chips will last a night, while prairie twigs and wood tends to burn hot and fast.

We call this just-born little Rhine maiden Lorelei. Don't really know what her name is; perhaps "those hereafter," will discover it in a deeper-reading of this beautiful story written on stone. Recognizable symbols and signs are numbered. Yet, there's so much of this that's not yet readable. The calendric indicates it's close-or-at winter solstice. Is this a Christmas child?

Inside the ladies have a cradle ready; it's padded soft-and-warm inside, of strong horsehide-outside. Together five ladies of the house greet the new born: Mother, three ladies, a young-teen age daughter. scurrying in and out of the winter house bringing in warming stones to make her mother comfortable.

Outside spearmen keep away beasts, stoke fires heating bed-warming stones, , are waiting, for a really welcome newcomer. The teen age girl's scurrying in and out of the winter house bringing in warming stones to make her mother comfortable.

Outside on the icy long-grass prairie a mother fox cries. Perhaps a fox paw is hung on the cradle. Somehow winter-horses bless the new born. Could her name be (lover of horses) Phillipa? Left: from Laugerie Basse, France. The symbols are amazingly similar to those used at Gönnersdorf..

[FORMAT] Here begins Lorelei's fascinating saga. It's continued in many more documents written on stone. Enormous highly-skilled, effort is devoted to keeping her alive, healthy and happy. Consider the tables that follow. Reflect on the environment: "Summers" in this glacial climate are only tolerably warm- rarely comfortably- perhaps three west-wind months annually. In all directions a cold prairie of long- many-colored grasses extend thousands of miles across the Amerasian super continent. North and south mile-thick continental glaciers glow purple. Dry, deep sub-freezing Easterly winds roar across Amerasia through the winters [even as the little girl is born]. Seasonally [in four groupings- a TETRAFAUNA] Herds of millions thunder across the prairie, giant predators follow, scavengers lurk. This is Lorelei's world. Loved, she survives. She, is us; and we are her.

[FORMAT] .-3-.Marriage, Mother & Child. A story from 14,500 years ago about a Little Rhine Maiden

Constructing a history of proto-history, myth, legend and religion can in outline be accomplished with available archaeological, prehistoric, and written materials, The outline will be nebulous. It won't be the first [see: References]; but it will add two things to what's been done to date:

-1- Chronological Climatology [note: enormously improved by polar ice cores, deep sea cores, varves, pollen types, peat-bog cores, tree rings, otoliths, radio-carbon dates, DNA-analyses]

-2- Our translation of written documents from the 12,500 BC Bølling warm interval [note: Paleolinguists projecting backward to Nostratic-Language of ca 15,000 to 12,500 BC, and to World-Language of ca 28,000BC (note- our date for World)]

Reconstructing over thirty-thousand years of religious history, mythology and even a fragmentary history is possible. "Lorelei's" story written 14,500 years ago on stone has an ancestry extending to at least 32,000 BC; and both ideas and emotions expressed therein are universal to this day in 2,000 AD.
